About our celebrity ambassador, Glen Rice

As a celebrity ambassador of Community Health of South Florida Inc. (CHI), retired basketball player Glen Rice has made it his mission to spread awareness about the impact CHI is making in our community. Rice is a three-time NBA All-Star and made 1,559 three-point field goals during his 15-year career. Rice won both an NCAA championship and NBA championship during his collegiate and professional career while playing for the Miami Heat (1989-1995), Charlotte Hornets (1995-1998), LA Lakers (1998-2000), New York Nicks (2000), Houston Rockets (2000-2003), and LA Clippers (2003-2004). In recent years, Rice has proven himself as a business owner and promoter through his company G-Force Fights, based in Miami, Florida.

benefiting the construction of our Children's Crisis Center

Community Health of South Florida, Inc. (CHI) has a new goal in mind: to build the first comprehensive Children's Crisis Center in southern Miami-Dade County.

This in-patient, 24-hour facility is designed to treat the more than 1,000 children in South Florida who are voluntarily brought in by their parents or who are Baker Acted at CHI's adult crisis center due to the risk of harming themselves or others. Unfortunately, CHI's current adult crisis unit is not equipped to treat children, so those kids endure a lengthy intake and transfer process as too often there are no available beds at other facilities.

Since 1971, CHI has been a beacon of hope for people of all ages by providing comprehensive primary and behavioral healthcare. CHI is committed to improving specialized care for children in South Florida who are suffering from psychological issues. The lack of access to intensive behavioral health treatment and shortage of overnight short-term residential children's crisis units is leaving far too many kids in dire situations, without the necessary psychiatric care they desperately need.

Help us support children like Jane!

At the tender age of seven, Jane told her mom that she wanted to commit suicide. Family issues, a lupus diagnosis, and being bullied at school had driven her into a deep depression. "It feels like you're in a dark hole. Like, you can't move, you can't see, you can't think or feel anything," recalls Jane. Shocked and overwhelmed, her mom, Antoinette, wondered: "How did we get here? How do I fix it?"

"It was really hurtful and sad," says Antoinette, who was working two jobs at the time. Immediately, Antoinette quit her second job to spend more time with her daughter. She also took Jane to get outpatient therapy at Community Health of South Florida, Inc. (CHI), where her mental health slowly began to improve thanks to the therapy and counseling that she received at CHI.

"CHI was the place that helped me be happy. So, I feel like it will help other people to be happy as well," says Jane. Both Antoinette and Jane hope their story will inspire others to support CHI's mission to build a Children's Crisis Center that will provide much-needed help to families in south Miami-Dade and Monroe Counties.
